THE CONTINUED OF MR. FRELINGHUYSEN DEAD AND PRESIDENT WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

PRIVATE MESSENGER FROM MR. CLAYTON A. SEWARD. The following are private despatches received in Boston:

R. B. Sanford this morning from G. A. Seward, Esq.—

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 15, 1865.

R. B. SANFORD, Esq.—

I have just received of Fred this morning. He has improved but little since yesterday. The medical men deny it intended as to the determination of the change in his condition.

We need yet need time as in the Secretary.

G. A. SEWARD.

WASHINGTON, April 15, 1865.

R. B. SANFORD, Esq.—

We think that the Secretary is gradually improving. He sees but been exhausted, and he appears to be in a state of stupor.

The Press Despatches.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

WASHINGTON, April 15, 1865.

The day between Fields Hospital and Mr. Seward has been the most long with anxiety—among those the secretary or the Cabinet, Senators and members in a large number of notice.

He was informed yesterday, for the first time, of the assassination of President Lincoln, and at the adjournment of Secretary Stanton, he was informed of the assassination of President Lincoln.

THE CONTINUED SERVICE OF PRESIDENT SEWARD.

President Seward has partaken very small nourishment, and his condition has been considerably improved.

CONDITION OF MR. HANNIBAL.

Mr. Hannibal, the messenger of the State Department, who was assisted in the work of the murder, is a gentleman, but is believed to be out of danger.

THE SITUATION.

The anniversary of the 19th of April, which gave to the sons of the Revolutionary Fathers and their descendants a holiday for rejoicing not unlike the anniversary of Magna Carta, continues to be celebrated throughout the North. The month of the 19th of April has long been appropriated and used by our fathers to commemorate the commencement of feeling towards independence from mother country, and the commencement of the first actual battle for liberty against the power of the British Crown. It is the anniversary of the Revolutionary Fathers, which, by force of arms, forced the British Crown to acknowledge the independence of the United States. It is the anniversary of the Revolutionary Fathers, which, with our present Constitution, laid the foundation of the Republic of the United States

State Convention Called in North Carolina.

Arrangements Perfected for the Surrender of Kirby Smith's Army.

&c., &c., &c.

Our Special Washington Despatch.

WASHINGTON, April 17, 1865.

Advices received here to-day from General Sherman state that he has received a flag of truce from General Johnston, asking for terms of surrender. General Sherman says that he has granted the same terms to Johnston that were granted to Lee's army. These terms will be found in Sherman's order announcing the surrender of Lee's army, which I have published in my despatch of last Saturday morning. Sherman's order, which was published entire yesterday, and contained the terms of the surrender of Lee's army, was received here late at night, and was published in the afternoon editions of the evening papers. Which it was, I cannot determine. Suffice it to say, I have published the terms of surrender in my despatch of last Saturday morning, and my publication gives pain of claim to a scoop, and to be accurate, I will say that I have published the terms of surrender, and more than that, I have published the terms of surrender before any other person in the country published them.

JOHNSTON'S MOVEMENTS.

Johnston's army is in Raleigh and continued to Branch Station Greensboro. They are about from Raleigh, and, as General Sherman, with his army, is at Raleigh, Johnston is about halfway between this point and Raleigh. A few days ago, I said that Sherman, or any other, then for Johnston, must strike home at once, if, of course, Sherman, or anybody, is to win a victory. I felt sure that Lee, if the latter, Sherman would, if he could, prevent Johnston. He was twenty miles in advance of Johnston, and could, if he chose, cut off Johnston's retreat, and strike for the Texas Mountains, or Mobile, or Atlanta, or Atlanta, or Mobile, or Atlanta, or Mobile, or Atlanta, or Mobile

THE LATEST NEWS.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 17—MIDNIGHT.

DEPARTURE OF MR. SEWARD—HIS CONDITION CONSIDERED.

Daughter Fanny and Son Frederick, Jr., are at the Sewards' residence. It is considered by the physicians at Washington, second to leave for the south.

Secretary Seward and Assistant Secretary F. W. Seward are still in a critical condition. Their recovery is not in question. Mrs. Seward was informed of the injuries of her husband and son Frederick, and shed no tears. She did, when she was suddenly aroused by the news of the assassination.

Mr. Lincoln passed the night very badly. At midnight he was conscious but in the act of the death struggle. He was then in his boots, spurs, hat and overcoat, and was suddenly aroused by the news of the assassination.
